My bird has flown away,
Far out of eight has flown, I know not where.
Look in your lawn. I pray,
To maiden, kind and fair,
And see if my beloved bird be there.

His eyes are full of light;
The eagle of the rock has such an eye;
And plumes, exceeding bright,
On his smooth temples lie,
And sweet his voice and tender as a sigh. Look where the grass is gay.
With summer blestoms; haply there he cowers;
And search, from spray to spray.
The leafy laurei bowers.
For well he loves the laurele and the flowers.

Find him, but do not dwell
With eyes too fond, on the fair forms you see,
Nor love his song too well;
Send him at once to me,
Or leave him to the air and liberty.

LIBERAL AND SENSIBLE.—The French Emperor, it is stated, has decided that Austrian subots may reside in France and during the war, if their conduct furnishes no ground for complaint. This is liberal and wise, and will tend to mitigate some of the evils of war, which usually bear with severity upon those not engaged in it, as well as those in arms. A Bishop on the Carriage Abuse. The Catholic Sentinel of the 21st of May contains a letter from Bishop Timon, in rela-tion to a rule recently promulgated by him re-specting the number of carriages to be allowed in attendance upon funerals among Catholics in the diocese over which he presides. He says: "The abuses of funerals often making them become a pastime, a pleasant drives the frequent descration of a sacred rite and duty; the unchristian scenses, at times, occurring even in the graveyard; the outraged feelings of real mourners; the widows and the orphans who, next day, had no food but what charity supplied, yet seldom the charity of the friends who, the day before, so freely spent their money to hire twenty or thirty carriages for the almost profic of a funeral; the tyranny of a worse than pagan custom, forcing the poor man, on pain of being called mean, to give his last dollar for a carriage, and leave his family next day without broad; the unhonored grave of the dead, unbread; the unhonored grave of the dead, unmarked for months or years even by a cross, after all this friendly display; the tunult in the gravoyard; the rictous conduct, which from time to time deeply grieved the pious and respectable, desecrated the cemetry, deprived it of its prestige for good; and often took away the wish of agala revisiting it; all this, and more, occasionally scandalising the faithful, and exciting the scoffs and ridicule of others,

have long called for an effectual remedy."

The Catholics have manifested some dispatisfaution at the rule proposed by the Bishop.

mann. The facts, as near as we can learn them, are as follows:

For some months Baumann had been paying his addresses to Miss Louise Bernius, a young girl living with F. T. Krafft, Esq., in whose employ Baumann also was. His attention met with no favor at the hands of the young lady, who had refused to marry him saveral times. On the night of his death, Baumann accounts of the young lady, who had refused to marry him saveral times. dimes. On the night of his death, Baumann accompanied the young lady part of the way home, leaving her and entering a beer saloon, where he remained but a short time. Louise, arriving at home, sat down on the front porch, where she was soon joined by Lorens, who began remonstrating with her as to the treatment he had received. After a few moments conversation, he caught hold of her moments conversation, he caught hold of her arm in a foreible manner, causing her to exclaim—"Don't, Lorenz, you hurt my arm, and will break my bracelet;" to which he replied—"You will not need your bracelet after to night." He being in the habit of talking gloomity at times, she paid no attention to the remark, but as he continued to quarrel with her, she told him she would leave him, and go to her room, and then left him, passing into the kitchen to get a candle. He followed her, and seized her by the neck, choking her until she was senseless, and then ascended to an upper room, where obtaining a pistol, and coming back to where she still lay, abot himself coming back to where she still lay, shot himself dead on the spot, falling a few feet from her. How long she lay, Miss Bernius can not tell, but thinks about an hour. On coming to her

She then rose and discovered the blood upon the floor, and tottering out of the room, she fell fainting against Mr. Krafft, who caught her in his arms. On coming to, she stated that Baumann had tried to kill her and then cut his own throat. Mr. Krafft then immediately started after Justice Wellandy to hold an inquest, and Louise, in company with hold an inquest, and Louise, in company with Mrs. Krafft started up the street to a neigh-Mrs. Krafft started up the street to a neighbor's, but fainting again on the way, Mrs. Krafft was compelled to take her in her arms and carry her to Mr. Ohli's residence. Capture of the Sepoy Chief, Tantia Topee, near Goona.

Nena Sahib having been driven out of British India, and taken refuge in the territory of Nepaul, the most formidable leader of the rebels left at leage was Tantia Torse els left at large was Tantia Topee, whose tactics were extremely dexterous, and whose stragetic abilities were remarkable. His political influence was small, but as a leader in guerilla contests, no chief among the rebels in the late war, so effectually reproduced the old Mahratta character. Although the British troops, in pursuing him, accomplished marches never dreamed of in times past, Tantia Topec still kept ahead of them. The London Times, which seems disposed to do justice to the nili-tary talents of Topee, in one of its editorials, has fallen into the error of attributing his capture to the energies and combinations of the British commanders.

No credit whatever is due to the British commanders for the capture of the rebel thief. He was the victim of treachery on the part of a creditor of his paymaster. This creditor fola creditor of his paymaster. This creditor fol-lowed Topee's party of marauders for the pur-pose of obtaining payment of his debt from the paymaster, as soon as he should find him in funds. The paymaster was killed at Rajgbur, and then his creditor called upon Tantia Topee for his debt. Tantia put him off with promises, and the creditor at last had to return home without his money. Tantis, with only thirty followers, without money, and in a truly forlorn condition, sought a retreat near Goons, which happened to be in the vicinity of persevering but du pointed creditor. As soon as the creditor earned of his arrival, he wrote to Sir Robert Hamilton, offering to betray him for the price set upon his head, and the amount of his claim upon the paymaster, which had been assumed by Tantia. The crediter's overtures were acted upon, and Tantia was captured, and handed over to a drum-head court martial.

PAINFUL CALAMITY.-The Dallas (Texas) Herald, of the 11th inst., says:
A gentleman just from Fort Worth reports a most painful calamity that occurred last Thurs day evening, near night, on the west fork of the Trinity, about seven miles above Fort Worth. A gentleman living very near West Fork, on returning home during the heavy rain that was falling, found his house was being rapidly surrounded with the flood that was rushing down the low lands bordering on the stream. He had a wife and seven children— took two of them on his shoulders, and carried them over the water to a shed on the premises placed them upon it, and started back for the other children and his wife. He had not gone far when a cry from the shed drew his attention; he looked back, and discovered it floating off with his two children on it. He rushed after it, and after following it nearly half a mile, succeeded in placing his children upon a place of safety. Night was rapidly coming on, and he returned to save his wife, but also, he found not even a verge of his home—no sign of wife or child, and, to add to the horors of the scene, darkness was fast settling down upon the rushing flood, whose appalling roar deadened the crier of his family, even if they then lived. The unhappy father has heard nothing from them yet, and every effort made to find their bodies has proved unavailing.

The rise of the water is represented as being unparalleled in the history of the country, for its suddenness and volume.

. Correspondence of the Herald. Fatal Accident. WASSINGTON Tr., DUBUQUE Co., IOWA,)

May 23d, 1859. SEDITOR HERALD:—I herewith send you ar account of one of the most distressing acci-dents on record, which resulted in the death of two children belonging to Robinson Clark, who lives in Otter Creek township, Jackson county, Iowa, within one and a quarter mile of the Dubuque county line. The circum stances are as follows: On the 13th inst, the two children, both little girls, one five and two children, both little girls, one five and the other seven years old, were sitting alongside of one of those three-legged cookingstoyes with their feet partially under it, and it is supposed that one of the children pushed the block from under one of the stove-legs, whereupon the stove overturned together with a wash-boiler containing four or five buckets of boiling water. Mrs. Clark being present and seeing the accident, immediately dashed a bucket full of cold water over the children and nulled the stove from them, but. dashed a bucket full of cold water over the children and pulled the stove from them, but the children were so badly scalded that they both died on last Sunday, one of them in the morning and the other in the afterneon. They were both intersed in one grave in the cemetery of the German Reformed Church at Church ville, Dubuque County, Iowa.

I send you these lines for publication for the purpose of cautioning others having stoves of this kind, and set up in the same way.

Yours, &c.,

Will our stove manufucturers in Cincinnati take note of this?
